

Mum is a £30k job

HOUSEWIVES would earn £30,000-a-year if they were paid for their chores, a survey reveals.

A stay-at-home mum works an average 8.8 hours a day, seven days a week – but gets nothing.

Doing the same jobs at work would earn them exactly £29,771 – £6,000 more than the national average – the alljoinon.com poll shows.

The site calculated how much time housewives spend doing different tasks, then compared them with paid jobs.

It said a cabbie would earn £2.53 for the average 23 minutes mums spend driving kids to and from school.